Warrenton Farmer's Wife Then Loses Consciousness and for Four Days Was Dying, with Best Medi-cal Experts Trying in Vain to Re-

Pellagra claimed Mrs. Sallie Graham at eorgetown Hospital yesterday after a struggle of twelve days and left a body weighing little more than fifty pounds in the place of a woman of more than Mrs. Graham was fifty-five years old and the wife of a well known farmer of Warrenton, Va. Her affliction was disovered about three weeks ago, and after vain effort of her family physicians to ope with the disease she was sent to eorgetown Hospital. A consultation, atended by a number of prominent medieal men, was held and the case was proounced virulent pellagra.

> The woman became insane and then nconscious. The physicians used every mergency application known to science n their efforts to check the disease. They were baffled. It became worse each day. The woman was reported dying four days ago. She had been gradually dying ever since until yesterday at 1:50 p. m., when the last spark of life left her body. Only Frame Remains. On the slab in the morgue of the hospital is the frame of a woman who, while she had never been stout, was the pic ture of health until a few days ago. It weighs less than half of what it did. Mr. Johns, the brother of Mrs. Gra ham, will claim the body to-day, and it probably will be taken back to Warrenton for burial. It will not be isolated, as pellagra is not considered contagious.
